FICTIONAL SAMPLE. This document is not a real contract, not a client file, and not legal advice. The names below are invented for a local text-extraction check.

1. Services. Example Harbor Press, a fictional publisher, will prepare a sample catalogue layout for Sample Northwind Buyer during a three-month trial. The work is limited to that layout.

2. Payment. Sample Northwind Buyer will pay each undisputed monthly invoice within thirty days after receipt. A late charge of one percent per month may apply to an undisputed overdue amount.

3. Confidentiality. Each party will keep the other party's non-public business information confidential for three years after this document ends, except where disclosure is required by law.

4. Limitation of liability. Each party's total liability arising from this fictional arrangement is limited to the fees paid during the three months before the claim. Neither party is liable for lost profits.

5. Indemnification. Each party will indemnify the other against third-party claims caused by its own negligence or its own breach of this document. The indemnity is mutual.

6. Termination. Either party may end this arrangement for convenience by giving thirty days' prior written notice. Either party may also end it if a material breach remains uncured for fifteen days after notice.

7. Automatic renewal. This trial ends after three months unless both parties sign a written extension. It does not renew by silence or by continued use.

8. Notices. Notices under this fictional document must be sent by email to the address each party wrote in its signature block. A notice is received on the next business day.